

Your employer is re-enrolling people back into their pension plan

The introduction of auto enrolment has helped many more people save for their future by giving them access to a workplace pension. As part of their ongoing duties, your employer must re-enrol certain people back into their pension plan every three years. This leaflet tells you what this means for you.

Your employer regularly monitors your age and earnings to work out if you need to be auto-enrolled into their pension plan.

1. You don't need to do anything. If your circumstances change, you may be auto-enrolled.

3. You can opt into the plan at any time. Just speak to your employer.

2. If this is the case, we'll send you more information at the time.

4. You can find out more about your employer's pension plan at yourplan.royallondon.com
